Paso High Theatre Company Brings Salem Witch Trials to Life in Darkly Comedic Fall Production

PASO ROBLES, Calif. (November 10, 2026) — Accusations are flying, rumors are spreading, and no one is safe from suspicion as the Paso High Theatre Company prepares to transport audiences to 1692 Massachusetts with its fall production of "Witches!? In Salem?!," opening Friday, November 13, at the Paso Robles High School Performing Arts Center.

Written by Matt Cox, "Witches!? In Salem?!" offers a darkly comedic look at the infamous Salem Witch Trials, blending historical events with outrageous characters, sharp humor, and a thought-provoking examination of the fear and hysteria that gripped a community.

As accusations of witchcraft spread throughout Salem, a group of local children finds themselves at the center of the chaos. Meanwhile, the arrival of the mysterious Bloodkraven family adds an unexpected twist to a town already consumed by suspicion. Through humor and historical storytelling, the production explores how rumors, social pressures, and collective fear can have devastating consequences.

The production gives Paso Robles High School students an opportunity to showcase their talents in live theatre while introducing audiences to a fascinating and troubling chapter of American history. Beneath its comedic moments, the play raises enduring questions about truth, justice, and the dangers of allowing fear to override reason.

Community members are invited to support these talented young performers and enjoy an entertaining evening of live theatre. Tickets are available now. Advance purchase is encouraged.
